We propose to fund two projects at the University of South Alabama to support the preservation and dissemination of community history of minoritized citizens in our area. Funding from the American Rescue Plan will help to resume work on projects affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Funding for positions at the McCall Rare Book & Manuscript Library will facilitate progress on the History, Humanities, Community, & Justice in Alabama project, coordinated by the University Honors College. Ongoing efforts by a number of faculty on community oral histories have resulted in a backlog of transcription and archival work on topics including: Africatown and descendants of enslaved Africans brought to the area on the Clotilda; Mardi Gras and the LGBTQ community; Mobile's Jewish community; and several others. The USA Archaeology Museum will fund an exhibition on artifacts, oral histories, and music recordings from historic African American communities, and includes traveling and education components.

The unique historical voice of Joseph Bloch, a German-Jewish immigrant to Mobile in 1848, will be heard through this collaborative interdisciplinary project. The Bloch project will encompass a six-panel visual display featuring archival images and interpretive text to illustrate the history of Mobile's immigrants, cultural life, and Jewish community. With scholarship from the fields of History, Public History, and Archival Science, the project will produce a portable exhibit exploring the life and experience of Joseph Bloch (1826-1903). This work seeks to broaden public knowledge of and engagement with Mobile's history and vibrant cultural life in the late 19th century. The exhibit will travel to numerous venues across the region during 2018. The exhibit is part of a collaboration supported by the Southern Jewish Historical Society and the University Libraries. Seed grant support will contribute to the production of the physical exhibit and its successful dissemination.

A political refugee from Germany, a 48-er, he became an active member of Mobile's Jewish community. Bloch was also central to the thriving musical culture of the city, conducting and playing in bands and orchestras, and as a beloved teacher of music. He lived through the Civil War in Mobile and wrestled with the political and moral dilemmas of the age. His unique historical voice will be heard through the display which will travel to public sites in the region through 2018.
